RE: Compliance Program and Federal Deficit Reduction Act

iCircle Services is committed to preventing and detecting fraud, waste and abuse. In support of this commitment, iCircle has established a Corporate Compliance Program. The purpose of the Corporate Compliance Program is to establish appropriate controls that will help ensure consistent compliance with the federal and State laws which govern our activities, and to detect violations of the law by employees and others affiliated with iCircle.

Elements of iCircle Services' Corporate Compliance Program include:

- A Compliance Officer who is responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Corporate Compliance Program.
- Written standards of conduct, policies and procedures that describes compliance expectations and promote iCircle commitment to compliance for all employees and others affiliated with iCircle.
- A Corporate Compliance Committee that operates and monitors the Corporate Compliance Program and initiates the necessary actions to correct any compliance problems.
- Regular, effective education and training programs for all employees whose job descriptions include activities that are subject to the Corporate Compliance Program.
- Procedures to encourage employees and others affiliated with iCircle to openly bring to the Corporate Compliance Committee's attention any situation that may be a violation of law or the Corporate Compliance Program without fear of threats, intimidation, retaliation or punishment.
- A system that allows for confidential and anonymous reporting of compliance issues or concerns.
- A system to respond to allegations of improper or illegal activities and the enforcement of appropriate disciplinary action against employees who have violated the Corporate Compliance policies.
- Fairly and firmly enforced disciplinary policies, including a policy of non-intimidation and non-retaliation, that encourage good faith participation in the compliance program, that articulate expectation for reporting compliance issues and assisting in their resolution and that outline sanctions for: a) failing to report suspected problems; b) participating in non-compliant behavior; or c) encouraging, directing, facilitating or permitting non-compliant behavior.
- Compliance audits and/or other evaluation techniques to monitor compliance and assist in the reduction of potential problem areas.

A goal of the Corporate Compliance Program is to educate appropriate employees with respect to federal and State statutes and regulations with which they must comply. In this regard, the federal Deficit Reduction Act (“DRA”) requires iCircle to provide all employees, contractors or agents with “detailed information” about:

- The federal False Claims Act
- The federal administrative remedies associated with the False Claims Act
- New York State laws pertaining to civil or criminal penalties for false claims and statements
- Whistleblower protections provided under federal and State laws
- The role of federal and State laws in preventing and detecting fraud, waste and abuse

This letter provides you with the information required by the DRA.

Federal and New York Statutes Related to Filing False Claims and Whistleblower Protections

Numerous federal and State laws prohibit health care providers from submitting “false” or “fraudulent” claims to Medicare and Medicaid and other federally-funded health care programs. Presented below is a listing and description of various federal and State statutes related to the filing of false Medicare and Medicaid claims.

Federal Laws

1. False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. 3729-3733.

The federal False Claims Act imposes penalties and fines on individuals and entities that file false or fraudulent claims for payment from Medicare, Medicaid, or other federal health programs. The penalty for filing a false claim is $10,781 - $21,563 per claim and the recoverable damages are between two and three times the value of the amount falsely received. In addition, the false claims filer may have to pay the government’s legal fees.

The False Claims Act allows private individuals to file lawsuits in federal court, just as if they were federal prosecutors. If the suit eventually concludes with payments back to the government, the person who started the case can recover 25-30% of the proceeds if the government did not participate in the suit, or 15-25% if the government did participate in the suit.

2. Administrative Remedies for False Claims, 31 U.S.C. 3801-3812.

This statute allows for administrative recoveries by federal agencies. If a person submits a claim that the person knows is false, or contains false information, or omits material information, then the agency receiving the claim may impose a penalty of up to $10,781 for each claim. The agency may also recover twice the amount of the claim.

A violation of this law occurs when a false claim is submitted, not when it is paid. Also, unlike the False Claims Act, the determination of whether a claim is false and the imposition of fines and penalties is made by the administrative agency, not by bringing lawsuits in the federal court system.

New York State Laws

New York false claims laws fall into two categories: administrative and civil laws; and criminal laws. Many of the laws overlap. Some apply to recipient false claims, and some apply to provider false claims.

A. Administrative and Civil Laws

1. State Finance Law Article 13, New York False Claims Act. The New York False Claims Act imposes penalties and fines on individuals and entities that knowingly file false or fraudulent claims for payment from Medicaid or other State health programs. The potential penalty for knowingly filing a false claim is (1) $6,000 - $12,000 per claim, (2) payment of between two and three times the State's damages, (3) payment of between two and three times the damages sustained by any local government, and (4) payment of the State's legal fees.

The New York False Claims Act allows private individuals to file lawsuits in State court. If the suit eventually concludes with payments back to the State, the person who started the case can recover a percentage of the proceeds based on whether the State did or did not participate in the suit.

2. Social Services Laws 145-c. If any person applies for or receives public assistance, including Medicaid, by intentionally making a false or misleading statement or misrepresenting, concealing or withholding facts (or committing an act intended to mislead, misrepresent, conceal, or withhold facts), then the person's needs shall not be taken in account in determining his or her need or the person's family's need, for six months if a first offense, 12 months if a second offense (or once if benefits received are $1,000 - $3,900), 18 months if a third offense (or once if benefits received are over $3,900) and five years for four or more offenses.
3. Social Services Law 145-b False Statements. It is a violation to knowingly obtain or attempt to obtain payment for items or services furnished under any Social Services program, including Medicaid, by use of a false statement, deliberate concealment or other fraudulent scheme or device.

The State or the local Social Services district may recover three times the amount incorrectly paid. In addition, the Department of Health may impose a civil penalty of up to $10,000 per violation. If repeat violations occur within five years, a penalty up to $30,000 per violation may be imposed if they involve more serious violations of Medicaid rules, billing for services not rendered or providing excessive services.

Whistleblower Protections

1. New York Labor Law 740. An employer may not take any retaliatory action against an employee if the employee discloses information about the employer's policies, practices or activities to a regulatory, law enforcement or other similar agency or public official. Protected disclosures are those that assert that the employer (1) is in violation of a law that creates a substantial and specific danger to the public health and safety; or (2) has committed health care fraud (as defined in Penal Law Article 177). The employee's disclosure is protected only if the employee first brought up the matter with a supervisor and gave the employer a reasonable opportunity to correct the alleged violation.

If an employer takes a retaliatory action against the employee, the employee may sue in State court for reinstatement to the same or equivalent position, any lost back wages and benefits and attorneys' fees. If the employer is a health provider and the court finds that the employer's retaliatory action was in bad faith, it may impose a civil penalty of $10,000 on the employer.

2. New York Labor Law 741. A health care employer may not take any retaliatory action against an employee if the employee discloses certain information about the employer's policies, practices or activities to a regulatory, law enforcement or other similar agency or public official. Protected disclosures are those that assert that, in good faith, the employee believes constitute improper quality of patient care. The employee's disclosure is protected only if the employee first brought up the matter with a supervisor and gave the employer a reasonable opportunity to correct the alleged violation, unless the danger is imminent to the public or patient and the employee believes in good faith that reporting to a supervisor would not result in corrective action.

If an employer takes a retaliatory action against the employee, the employee may sue in State court for reinstatement to the same or equivalent position, any lost back wages and benefits and attorneys' fees. If the employer is a health provider and the court finds that the employer's retaliatory action was in bad faith, it may impose a civil penalty of $10,000 on the employer.

3. Federal False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. 3730(h)) and New York False Claims Act (State Finance Law 191). An employee who is “discharged, demoted, suspended, threatened, harassed or in any manner discriminated against” because of the employee’s lawful acts under the federal or New York False Claims Act is entitled to reinstatement, double back pay with interest, special damages, and litigation costs and attorneys’ fees.
